

Zen To Done

Course code: KORZTD1

The Zen To Done workshop offers a practical and experiential approach to personal productivity inspired by the principles of the Zen To Done method by Leo Babauta. The course focuses on developing a simple and sustainable way of working with tasks and workload. Throughout the day, participants work on one specific work task or project, which serves as a practical framework for practicing focus, setting priorities, and returning to unfinished work within everyday working reality.

Who is the course for

The course is designed for anyone who faces a high workload, frequent interruptions, and performance pressure, and is looking for a sustainable approach to personal productivity.

What we teach you

The aim of the training program is to develop participants' ability to manage their work tasks more clearly and with less internal pressure. The course supports the skill of consciously choosing priorities, working with focus, and handling situations where tasks accumulate, are frequently interrupted, or remain unfinished.

The acquired insights and methods are designed to be sustainable in the long term and easily transferable into everyday practice.

Benefits for participants:

- greater clarity in work priorities
- the ability to consciously choose what to focus on
- reduced internal pressure and feelings of overwhelm
- improved ability to manage distractions and interruptions
- easier return to unfinished tasks
- a concrete and realistic framework for practical application
